ABOUT THE PROGRAMME

The global economy has been affected by rising geopolitical tensions and shifts in economic power dynamics which has resulted in an increasingly complex environment. At the center of this landscape is China, one of the world's most important players in the global economy, whose recent economic and political developments are having significant implications on the world. How would this impact South East Asia?

The Malaysian equity capital market, a critical component of the economy, provides a vital source of funding for companies seeking to grow and expand is also subject to various risks and uncertainties in the current economic environment. It is crucial for investors and capital market intermediaries to navigate the growing uncertainties in a rapidly changing landscape and to reassess the risks and opportunities in its business and operations to make more informed decisions.

This webinar will bring together leading experts in the fields of economics and the equity capital market who will provide critical insights on the current environment including prospects of global demand and other drivers of economic activity. Perspectives on geo-political risks and its impact on the economic landscape will be examined together with China's importance in the global environment. In addition, the webinar will review South East Asia's near and long term outlook and factors that are driving economic growth in the region. The panel discussion will deep dive into the risks and opportunities of the equity capital market as well as sustainability trends in Malaysia and the region.
